Forecast For The United Kingdom
Issued by Met Office Exeter
at 1600 on Saturday 13 Mar 2021

++ Valid for broadcast between 1800 and 0600

Headline:
Breezy and unsettled. Turning drier for many next week.

This Evening and Tonight:
Showers becoming mostly confined to northwestern areas. Clear spells developing, especially in the south and east where some grass frost is possible in sheltered spots. Strong winds easing for most.

Sunday:
A dry start with sunny spells across southern and eastern parts. Rain arriving across Northern Ireland and western Scotland, moving southeastwards across many areas during the afternoon. Remaining breezy.

Outlook for Monday to Wednesday:
Plenty of fine, dry weather with sunny spells and moderate winds. However, a rain-band will cross the country overnight Monday, and could become slow moving in the far south-east Tuesday.

(C) Crown Copyright 2021. Published by the Met Office.